

Michael Van Devere
Bensonhurst Dental Testimonial

Since attending college in New York City, Alex and Marina Rubinshtein have been good friends of mine. At the time, I was studying filmmaking at the School of Visual Arts on 23rd Street and my dental coverage directed me to New York University College of Dentistry, where Alex was completing his degree while taking on local students. This was in 1989 and I'm still one of his patients! In the early 1990's, he and Marina began Bensonhurst Dental Care in a small office in Brooklyn and I visited them for routine cleanings and cosmetic work, because, like their other patients, I was pleased with their dental skill and thought highly of them personally. Their excellent service keeps me on their patient list almost twenty years later, though today their office has grown considerably and I commute from my new home in Boston. Their attentive staff and friendly facility welcomes me each time I travel from out-of-town. It's wonderful to see Dr. Marina and Dr. Alex work all these years together; they are a great team and I'm proud of their growing success. I trust their advice, whether it's about small matters like flossing more or larger steps that will improve the health and longevity of my smile. Nowadays, a good smile is more than teeth, it's success. And the Rubinshtein's provide great smiles!